Dispositions Valued in Teachers

The faculty has identified the following key dispositions that they value and that teacher candidates are expected to exhibit:

- A belief that all children can learn and can be guided to achieve their highest potential for success
- A belief in ethical standards of practice and in demonstrating attitudes of caring, fairness, honesty, and responsibility
- A belief in maintaining a safe, supportive, and challenging learning environment
- A belief that teaching demands a life-long pursuit of excellence in education

Dispositions Valued in Teachers

The faculty has identified the following key dispositions that they value and that teacher candidates are expected to exhibit:

- A belief that all children can learn and can be guided to achieve their highest potential for success
- A belief in ethical standards of practice and in demonstrating attitudes of caring, fairness, honesty, and responsibility
- A belief in maintaining a safe, supportive, and challenging learning environment
- A belief that teaching demands a life-long pursuit of excellence in education

The faculty has identified the following key dispositions that they value and that teacher candidates are expected to exhibit:

- A belief that all children can learn and can be guided to achieve their highest potential for success
- A belief in ethical standards of practice and in demonstrating attitudes of caring, fairness, honesty, and responsibility
- A belief in maintaining a safe, supportive, and challenging learning environment
- A belief that teaching demands a life-long pursuit of excellence in education